

Carson Systems appoints Greg Ingham as Chairman

Web company seeks to step up growth

09/07/07 – Bath-based international conference and web applications developer, Carson Systems, today announces the appointment of Greg Ingham as Chairman.

As well as running a series of highly respected conferences for web professionals, including Future of Web Design, Future of Web Apps and Future of Online Advertising, Carson Systems also builds web applications such as DropSend, Amigo and Vitamin. It has recently launched conferences in the US and sees growth coming both from new conferences and in taking existing events international.

Ryan Carson, Founder and Director of Carson Systems said of the appointment:

“Since our incorporation, just over three years ago, we’ve experienced tremendous growth. Now we’re keen to build on that success, especially with the development of our events business. Greg’s appointment is an important element of these growth plans. His depth and breadth of experience will be invaluable to us”.

Ingham, who also chairs website publisher Eurogamer Network and has various other commitments alongside the running of his own media firm, MediaClash, commented:

“Carson Systems is a smart and innovative company, with highly successful events and clever products. I’m keen to get involved with the business to help it plan and achieve its huge potential. Husband and wife team, Ryan and Gill have created a great company. The team are dedicated and enthusiastic and I’m sure they’ll be a pleasure to work with.”

The appointment is effective immediately.

ENDS

About Carson Systems: Carson Systems is a privately held company based in the United Kingdom, in beautiful Bath. They focus on building web applications, while also offering world-class events for the web industry. More information can be found on their website at www.carsonsystems.com

About Greg Ingham: Greg Ingham began as a journalist in the early 80s. He launched trade paper CTW as Editor and then moved to Future Publishing as Publisher in 1988, becoming MD in 1993 and CEO in 1998. Future floated in June 1999. By the time he left in June 2006, the company had grown from 30-odd people and £2m sales to 1,600 and £225m. Ingham is chair of Eurogamer, the DTI Games Forum, a Trustee of the games industry charity ESC, chair of the Theatre Royal Bath and a non-exec of Bright Things plc. He is also chief executive of MediaClash - a diverse Bath-based media business which he jointly owns and runs with his wife, Jane Ingham. You can read more about MediaClash at www.mediaclash.co.uk

For more information:

Laura Sharples: 01225 47 58 60 laura.sharples@mediaclash.co.uk

Ryan Carson: 01225 31 33 77 ryan@carsonsystems.com